...planting the seeds of education

In response to increased restrictions communicated by both Virginia Tech and Carilion, we will be postponing or moving to virtual offerings for our upcoming TEACH sessions. Please see more information below and stay tuned!

Educator Opportunities: Join the IAMSE Virtual Conference FREE! STARTS TODAY...JUNE 15!!

The annual International Association of Medical Science Educators (IAMSE) Conference has shifted to a virtual platform and is being offered completely FREE. The conference is running from June 15 – 18, 2020 and is a great opportunity to connect and learn from others with the same passion for improvement of teaching and learning medical and basic sciences. Remember, attendance at sessions related to improving your skills as a teacher will count toward your annual VTCSOM Faculty Development Related to Teaching credit hours requirement. Additional meeting details and registration can be found at www.iamseconference.org.

Teaching Tidbits: Synchronous Online Teaching Sessions, Citing Work Affected by COVID in CV, & COVID Treatment Simulation Cases

- Learn Zoom, WebEx, and Microsoft Teams: Interested in learning the basics (or beyond) of bringing your teaching online in a synchronous online learning venue but were unable to attend one of our teaching sessions? No fear! Head over to the TEACH webpage to view session recordings and review our PowerPoints to help guide your use of Zoom, WebEx, or Microsoft Teams. If you would prefer one on one or small group guidance, don't hesitate to contact us TEACH@carilionclinic.org.
- Citing Work Affected by COVID in your CV: With the cancellation of in-person meetings many of us have wondered how we should share scholarly work that was accepted but not presented on our CV. Check out this resource to see how to accurately represent your hard-work that was peer-reviewed and accepted but you never got the opportunity to share.
- COVID Treatment Simulations: The New England Journal of Medicine has launched a series of Covid-19 treatment simulations that can be used for medical student remote learning resources. The simulations build clinical reasoning skills and can each be played a number of times and, each time, the individual case will vary slightly to keep things challenging.

Upcoming Events: Join Us for June Health Professions Educator (HPE) Series Session!

In an effort to maintain a sense of normalcy and continue to support our faculty by offering timely content, we have moved some of our regularly scheduled offerings online! See below for details about our upcoming HPE session!

Health Professions Educator Series June 2020: "It's not about the stats: Reflections on teaching 'evidence-based medicine' 20+ years into the movement..." with John Epling, MD, MSEd (Monday, June 22 from 12:00 pm – 1:00 pm, Online via Zoom). No registration necessary, see calendar invitation for Zoom details.

What's New with TEACH:

Learning with Laughter: Feedback Giving You Heartburn?

Negative feedback from learners can cut deep, even if it comes from your homeschooling teenager. Some unsolicited or perhaps formally gathered learner feedback may have you reaching for the door, but especially in these evolving times we must remember to use these comments to improve and enhance our teaching. As Dr. Rebecca Pauly reminded us at our April Health Professions Educator Series, don't "throw out the baby with the bath water." Instead, we should look at feedback as an opportunity for improvement and to take the time to interpret feedback trends. Watch Dr. Pauly's presentation here for more!
